		Title	Methods for Treating Indomethacin Responsive Headaches

Sir:

I, Lawrence C. Newman, M.D., am a co-inventor of the above referenced application. Enclosed is a copy of my Curriculum Vitae which demonstrates that I am qualified to speak on the level of one of skill in the art.

I hereby declare the following:

Prior to my work in this area as embodied in the present application and claims, it was my expectation, which is the same as with what those of skill in the art would expect, that a topical formulation of indomethacin would not be able to supply therapeutically effective levels of indomethacin to be able to successfully treat indomethacin-responsive headaches. As such, prior to my work in this area, the methods of treating indomethacin-responsive headaches involved only oral and rectal administration of indomethacin, because it was believed that only oral and rectal formulations (not topical formulations) could supply sufficient levels of indomethacin to treat indomethacin-responsive headaches. Thus at that time, there was an extremely low expectation of success that a topical formulation of indomethacin could supply a therapeutically effective amount of indomethacin to successfully treat indomethacin-responsive headaches.

The present application and claims are based on our discovery of the unexpected result that a topical formulation of indomethacin provides a therapeutically effective method of treating indomethacin-responsive headaches.

I further declare that all statements made herein of my own knowledge are true and that all statements made on information and belief are believed to be true; that these statements were made with the knowledge that willful false statements and the like so made are punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, under Section 1001 of Title 18 of the United States Code; and that such willful false statements may jeopardize the validity of the application or any patent issuing thereon.
